Reading's statement of earnings for July showed the anthracite coal trade at its worst in that month, for the recepts of the Reading Coal and Iron Company were $1,001,675 less than in the corresponding month last year. This decrease was, however, offset to the extent of $514,000 by a decrease in expenses. A decrease of $848,000 in the proportionate cash reserve as compared with last year was on the other hand only partially reduced by a saving in expenses, and the net railroad earnings of all companies showed a decrease of $5,190,000 from the figures for July, 1907. Bullish enthusiasm on the stock seemed but little tempered by this unfavorable showing, for the street long ago lost the labit of buying Reading for any other reason than the value of its call properties. The road's current carnings are littly regarded.

Consolidated Gas scored a further advance, and there was heard more of the talk of the prospect of a favorable decision in the 80-cent gas cash. Reading's statement of earnings for

Consolidated Gas scored a further advance, and there was heard more of the talk of the prospect of a favorable decision in the 80-cent gas case. That suit and the suit testing the commedity clause of the Hepburn bill have been made to do service, it was remarked, throughout the summer, and as a decision in either suit is unlikely before October, there is still abundant time to bet on what the United States Supreme Court will do. A wager on the court's decision has been the essence of most of the buying of both Consolidated Gas and the stocks of the lard coal roads.

NEW YORK, August 29.—The same stocks which were strong on Friday were strong again to-day, and the trading in them was again the most conspicuous, but the market, particularly in the last hour, was broader and seemed as a whole under better control than on any previous day of the week. There were no new developments to account for the continued strength and improved range of the market, and the advance was again attributed to the speculative operations of a small but powerful bull party which has pounded the various bear contingents into abject submission.

The first hour was duil, with prices of many stocks sagging below the level of Friday's close. The demonstration of strength was reserved for the second hour, and it appeared to traders that the market leaders were resorting to the old device of endeavoring to the sold device of endeavoring

The principal bull argument of the day was deduced from the American Railway Association's report on idle cars. The report showed an increase of 28,000 in the number of cars in service on August 19th, as compared with August 5th, a gain greater than in any other period of two weeks since June. The advance was greater in coal and gondola cars than in boxes, as was the case in the last previous report on idle cars, and this circumstance was used to support the contention that the railroads are gaining traffic from an increased activity in manufacturing, as well as from the movement of the crops.

Though public interest in the stock

PHODUCE MARKET.

The heavy rains severely retarded the hauling or produce from neighboring sections last week, but the market remained firm and active. Eggs were very high and scarce, and in good demand. Receipts of butter were light, especially towards the close of of the week. The market for poultry was active and firm at good prices, with receipts, very light. Fancy apples were in somewhat better demand. Apples—Fancy—
